CANTATA for Reformation Sunday

Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott BWV 80

Johann Sebastian Bach
(b.1685 Eisenach; d.1750 Leipzig)

Revised and expanded: Leipzig, around 1730 for Reformation Day (BWV 80b).
BWV 80 is a reworking of cantatas BWV 80a and BWV 80b, between 1735-1740.

I. Chorale
Text: Martin Luther (1483-1546): Ein feste Burg, Verse 1

Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott,
ein gute Wehr und Waffen;
Er hilft uns frei aus aller Not,
die uns itzt hat betroffen.
Der alte böse Feind,
mit Ernst ers itzt meint,
groß Macht und viel List
sein grausam Rüstung ist, auf Erd ist nicht seinsgleichen.

A mighty fortress is our God,
a good defence and weapon;
He freely helps us out of all distress,
that now has affected us.
The old evil enemy,
earnestly now plots against us,
great might and much cunning
are his cruel armor,
on earth He has no equal.

II. Aria
Text: Salomon Franck (1659-1725), Martin Luther: Ein feste Burg, Verse 2

Aurora Deeds, soprano
Timothy Flynn, bass
Joshua Lauretig, oboe d’amore

Alles, was von Gott geboren,
ist zum Siegen auserkoren.

Mit unser Macht ist nichts getan, wir sind gar bald verloren.
Es streit’ vor uns der rechte Mann,
den Gott selbst hat erkoren.

Wer bei Christi Blutpanier
in der Taufe Treu geschworen, siegt in Christo für und für.

Fragst du, wer er ist?
Er heißt Jesus Christ,
der Herre Zebaoth,
und ist kein anderer Gott,
das Feld muss er behalten.

Alles, was von Gott geboren,
ist zum Siegen auserkoren.

All, that is born of God,
is destined for victory.

By our might nothing is accomplished,
Soon we will be lost.
The right man fights for us,
whom God himself has chosen.

Those who by the bloodstained banner of Christ
have sworn faithfulness in baptism, gain victory in Christ for ever and ever.

Do you ask who he is?
He is called Jesus Christ,
the Lord of Sabaoth,
and there is no other God,
He shall hold the field of battle.

All, that is born of God,
is destined for victory.
III. Recitative
Text: Salomon Franck

Timothy Flynn, bass

Erwäge doch, Kind Gottes, die so große Liebe, da Jesus sich mit seinem Blute dir verschriebe, womit er dich zum Kriege wider Satans Heer und wider Welt, und Sünde, geworben hat! Gib nicht in deiner Seele dem Satan und den Lastern statt! Laß nicht dein Herz, den Himmel Gottes auf der Erden, zur Wüste werden! Bereue deine Schuld mit Schmerz, dass Christi Geist mit dir sich fest verbinde!

Only consider, child of God, how great His love, since Jesus himself with his blood has given his pledge for you, by which for the war against Satan's army and against world, and sin, has enlisted you! Do not give any place in your soul to Satan and vices! Do not let your heart, God's heaven on earth, become a desert! Repent your guilt with grief, so that Christ's spirit may be firmly united with you!

IV. Aria
Text: Salomon Franck

Aurora Deeds, soprano

Komm in mein Herzenshaus, Herr Jesu, mein Verlangen! Treib Welt und Satan aus und lass dein Bild in mir erneuert prangen! Weg, schnöder Sünden Graus!

Come into my heart's house, Lord Jesus, my desire! Drive world and Satan out and let your image within me renewed shine forth! Away, loathsome horror of sin!

V. Chorale
Text: Martin Luther: Ein feste Burg, Verse 3

Und wenn die Welt voll Teufel wär und wollten uns verschlingen, so fürchten wir uns nicht so sehr, es soll uns doch gelingen. Der Fürst dieser Welt, wie saur er sich stellt, tut er uns doch nicht, das macht, er ist gericht', ein Wörtlein kann ihn fallen.

And if the world were full of devils and they wanted to devour us, then we would not be very afraid, we should still succeed. The Prince of this world, however grimly he presents himself, can do nothing against us, already he is judged, a little word can cut him down.
VI. Recitative
Text: Salomon Franck

Benjamin, Lawson, tenor

So stehe dann
bei Christi blutgefärbten Fahne,
o Seele, fest und glaube,
dass dein Haupt dich nicht verlässt,
ja, dass sein Sieg
auch dir den Weg zu deiner Krone bahne!
Tritt freudig an den Krieg!
Wirst du nur Gottes Wort
so hören als bewahren,
so wird der Feind gezwungen auszufahren.
Dein Heiland bleibt dein Hort!

So take your stand then
by Christ's bloodstained banner,
o soul, firmly and believe,
that your leader will not forsake you,
yes, that His victory
will also pave the way to your crown!
March joyfully to war!
If only God's word
is both heard and kept by you,
then your enemy will be forced to withdraw.
Your saviour remains your stronghold!

VII. Duet
Text: Salomon Franck

Maria Parker, mezzo-soprano
Benjamin Lawson, tenor
Anna Mattix, oboe taille
Gretchen Fisher, violin

Wie selig sind doch die,
die Gott im Munde tragen;
doch selger ist das Herz,
das ihn im Glauben trägt.
Es bleibet unbesiegt und kann die Feinde schlagen
und wird zuletzt gekrönt,
en wenn es den Tod erlegt.

How blessed are those who bear God in their mouths;
bout more blessed is the heart,
that bears God in faith.
Such a heart remains undefeated and can strike the enemies and will in the end be crowned,
after death has been defeated.

VIII. Chorale
Text: Martin Luther: Ein feste Burg, Verse 4

Das Wort sie sollen lassen stahn und kein Dank dazu haben.
Er ist bei uns wohl auf dem Plan
mit seinem Geist und Gaben.
Nehmen sie uns den Leib,
Gut, Ehr, Kind und Weib,
laß fahren dahin,
sie habens kein' Gewinn;
das Reich muss uns doch bleiben.

They shall pay no heed to God's word
and have no thanks for it.
He is indeed with us on the field of battle with his Spirit and his gifts.
If they take our body wealth, honor, child and wife
let them be taken away,
they gain nothing by this;
The kingdom must still remain ours.

BWV 80

The grand reformation cantata BWV 80 “Ein’ feste Burg” has a complex history. It began life in Weimar as a chamber scale cantata for the first Sunday in Lent called “Oculi.” The reading for that Sunday is the passage from Luke where Christ throws out the devil. He himself is accused of being the devil and replies with the famous passage about a house divided against itself. The monumental struggle between good and evil brought forth a muscular and powerful libretto from Salomo Franck. This original version began with an aria for bass and strings in which an oboe played a highly ornamented version of “Ein’ feste Burg.” It continued with a secco recitative and soprano aria with continuo and a secco recitative for tenor and a duet for alto, tenor, violin and oboe da caccia. It ended with a four-voice harmonization of the second verse of “Ein’ feste Burg.”

Some time early in his tenure in Leipzig, Bach expanded this cantata. There was no music at Thomaskirche during Lent, and the Reformation day festivities were a grand event in Leipzig. He added a large motet style movement using the first verse of the chorale, added a soprano, and presumably cut the oboe into the bass aria, using the text for the second verse of the chorale. After the soprano recitative and aria he added a large chorale movement with strings and chorus in octaves. The final chorale harmonization was modified to fit the last verse of the chorale instead of the first. There are many extent period scores of the piece. At some time 3 oboes were added to the unison chorale, along with somewhat primitive trumpet and drum parts composed by Bach’s eldest son Wilhelm Friedemann Bach. There are versions of both the opening motet and the unison chorale movement. Even when these versions are sorted out, there are certain anomalies, particularly in the first motet. For all of its problems and the several layers represented in the score, there is no doubt that this is one of the most important and magnificent of Bach cantatas. It is in a sense the ultimate Lutheran piece, the grand climax of Lutheran music. ‘ “Ein’ feste Burg” has always been Luther’s most famous chorale, and it is one of his best.

Bar-form chorales [A-A-B form] are actually not too common in Luther, but here he not only has written the arch-typical bar-form piece, but uses the form ingeniously to lay out his text. The battle between Jesus and Satan, which is here whipped into a frenzy, is not only fought out in this hard-hitting and tough text, but is fought out in the oppositions inherent in the form. The Stollen [literally ‘stanza’ - the repeated first phrase of the chorale] are almost always reserved for a description of the righteous Christian. The Abgesang [literally ‘aftersong’ - the ‘B’ phrase] is usually a description of the forces of Satan. The last phrase, which in characteristic bar-form fashion recapitulates the end of the Stollen, describes the triumph over Satan. This is not always the case, but it happens in enough verses that it is clear that the opposition of good and evil was on his mind when he set the words in this chorale.

The motet chorus is a magnificent achievement. In a genre in which Bach was the absolute master, this is probably the greatest motet chorus. It is laid out on very broad lines. There are certain almost arbitrary decisions that the performer will have to make before taking on this piece. The chorale tune is presented in long notes by the two oboes in unison. This is in canon with the pedal of the organ and the string bass.
The texture of the actual motet is quite complicated: there are four voices plus an independent continuo line. In addition there are the trumpet parts written by W. Friedemann Bach. It is fashionable nowadays to leave them out [which is the case for this performance]. One suspects that they were written at the instruction of J.S. Bach. The battle between good and evil is brilliantly articulated. In the Stollen the lines and the text of both phrases in each version of the “A” section are broadly mixed together. There is a conscious breadth and lack of differentiation between these two phrases. We only know where we are in the form by the canon between the oboes and low bass. The Abgesang on the other hand is tightly and clearly phrased. Each line of text is clearly defined not only in the canon but also in the voices and continuo. The harmony becomes progressively more chromatic, and reaches a hair-raising pitch in the penultimate phrase. The last phrase not only recapitulates the last phrase of the Stollen, but also the breadth of its delivery at the beginning of the movement.

It was a brilliant and daring gesture for Bach to put a movement before the first movement of his [Lenten] “Oculi” cantata. But the breadth and majesty contrasts wonderfully with the energy and liveliness of the Weimar movements. This bass aria is one of Bach best pieces from Weimar. A concerto grosso type figuration for all of the strings is played against bravura scale passages in the voice. Most scores print both the oboe and the soprano versions of the chorale melody. They probably were never played together, for the two versions produce some interesting heterophony. In Weimar Bach made some of his most interesting advances in recitative writing. Here, at the end of the secco recitative [free form recitative with solo and continuo] #3, the text speaks of being bound and united with Christ’s soul. Bach sets up a pattern of imitation between the voice and the [organ and cello] continuo, particularly the three-note motive on the words “Christi Geist.” The two are bound together by the canonic writing.

The soprano aria is the first really intimate and lyrical thing in the cantata. Franck comes up with a lovely metaphor, “come into the house of my heart.” Over and over again in these Weimar cantatas Franck finds an every day image that is just right for the idea that he is expressing. The music is floating and ethereal. Particularly striking is the opening line of both the continuo and voice that seems to float down from heaven. Even the more aggressive sides of the text are miniaturized, very much in keeping with the child’s voice.

The Leipzig unison chorale bursts in impressively. One spot, a big octave doubling of the string melody seems particularly ungainly. There are problems with the doubling oboe parts, also. It is a magnificent movement; and the only example of extended unison chorus writing in Bach gives the piece a particular congregational feel.

The piece returns back to two Weimar movements. As wonderful as the unison chorale is, something is lost from the Weimar version of having the piece remain quiet through the soprano and the alto-tenor duet. The tenor recitative again has an extended and impressive arioso section, this time with florid passagework on the words “my Savior is my shield.” The gorgeous duet for alto, tenor, violin and oboe taille [alto oboe] is a heavenly picture of being in a state of grace. Bach has been using tonic-dominant oppositions all during the cantata up to this point. Here he avoids the dominant and prefers the sub-dominant. The passivity of the subdominant also reminds us that the cantata is coming to a close. Here is an effect much more in common with classical rather than Baroque music. Bach writes a duet for alto and tenor for the first time here. Already there is a sign of the psychological complexity and ambiguity of that combination.

This is a quality that would be present throughout his career. The combination of violin and oboe da caccia is inspired. The dark fruity tones of the oboe da caccia combine wonderfully with the violin, which is kept mostly in the bottom part of its range. The counterpoint is at times quite elaborate, and the words are vividly characterized. One should notice how the two voices join together on the same low G at the end on the words “Tod erlegt [death’s defeat].”

Bach made some adjustments in the four-voice chorale in Leipzig to fit a different verse of the text. This is, in a way the ultimate Bach chorale harmonization. It is so well known, and is in virtually every Protestant hymn book in the world that it has become every person’s idea of what “Ein’ feste Burg” is.

About our Soloists

Aurora Deeds, soprano, is currently serving as a lecturer at SUNY College at Fredonia as she finishes her doctoral degree at the University of Iowa. She earned her Undergraduate and Graduate Degrees in Vocal Performance from SUNY Fredonia in 2008 and 2010. Her most recent roles have included Fiordiligi in Così fan Tutte, Nella in Gianni Schicchi, La Suora Infermiera in Suor Angelica. Her operatic repertoire also includes Mimi in Puccini’s La Bohème, the Queen of the Night in Mozart’s Die Zauberflöte, and Violetta in scenes from Verdi’s La Traviata. She has served as a soprano soloist throughout her career. Her most recent concert performances include Salieri’s Mass in D Major, Bach’s Cantata No. 79, Mozart’s Requiem, Beethoven’s Choral Fantasy, and Vivaldi’s Domine Deus. In addition to operatic and concert performances, Aurora teaches private voice lessons.
Timothy Flynn, bass, is a 2005 graduate of SUNY Fredonia, where he received his BA in Voice Performance. Since moving to Buffalo in 2006, Tim has been very active in the Buffalo music scene. Has is now in his 13th season singing with the Chancel and Chapel choirs of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church as section leader. In March of 2016, Tim sang the role of Pontius Pilate, in Bach’s St. Matthew’s Passion, performed as a collaboration with the Choirs of Holy Trinity and SUNY Fredonia and the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra. He has also appeared in Opera Sacra’s productions of “Joan of Arc at the Stake,” “Dialogues of the Carmelites,” “MASS” by Leonard Bernstein, and “The Play of Herod.” He has also performed with the Harmonia Chamber Singers over as span of five seasons. In 2015, Tim appeared on stage as part of the chorus for The Rolling Stones’ Buffalo tour stop. His current voice instruction is with Dr. Margaret Kuhl. Tim currently works for Ingram Micro as a Sales Representative.

Benjamin Lawson, tenor, is a soon to be graduate of SUNY Fredonia looking to pursue a career in arts administration and classical voice. Musical credits include baritone in Chelsea Opera’s 2017 production of Bending Toward the Light, ensemble with the Fredonia Hillman Opera, and tenor with the Fredonia Chamber Choir. In addition to performing, Ben enjoys writing and producing his own music as well as possesses an avid fandom for all things Star Wars. Ben would like to thank Holy Trinity for their overwhelming support and providing him the opportunity to share wonderful music with the Buffalo community.

Maria Parker, mezzo-soprano/alto, is a full-time licensed clinical social worker and certified trauma therapist. She recently opened her own private practice and works with adults to help them work through and heal from a vast range of mental health concerns and stressors. She earned a Bachelors with honors from the University of Pittsburgh in both Psychology and Music in 2011 and her Masters in Social Work from the University of Buffalo in 2013. She started taking private voice lessons from Mr. Robert Vehar in 2004, continued her practice in college privately with Mr. Richard Teaster until 2011 and has since been studying voice with Dr. Margaret Kuhl.

Maria has performed as a professional soloist since 2008 in many concert works including Bach Cantata No. 4, 23, 79 and 182, Vivaldi's Gloria, Haydn's Mass No. 9 "Paukenmesse," Copland's In the Beginning, Telemann's Magnificat, and Cary Ratcliff's Ode to Common Things. Most recently she performed in Fredonia's Bach and Beyond Festival as the solo alto choir member and the second witch for Purcell's Dido and Aeneas. In January, she will be performing as the mezzo-soprano soloist for the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra in their production of Mendelssohn's A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Maria has performed with various choral groups and orchestras as a soloist including Ars Nova, Camerata di Sant’Antonio, Buffalo Philharmonic Chorus, Buffalo Chamber Players, Musica Sacra, Buffalo Master Chorale and the Lutheran Chorale of the Niagara Frontier. She has had the opportunity to tour internationally with multiple vocal groups since 2009 including performing in six different regions of China. She has been a member and soloist with the Vocális Chamber Choir since January 2012 and is a member and soloist with the Women of Vivaldi.
